

33rd UN International Day of Older Persons
“Fulfilling the Promises of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights for Older Persons: Across Generations.”

Monday, 2 October 2023 10:00 AM - 1:00 PM
ECOSOC Chamber, UN Headquarters, New York

Theme:

This year’s overarching theme for the United Nations International Day of Older Persons in 2023 focuses on “Fulfilling the Promises of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights: Across Generations.” The commemoration will be celebrated by the NGO Committees on Ageing in New York, Geneva and Vienna – each with a unique and complementary approach to the overall theme.

The New York commemoration of the #OlderPersonsDay will highlight the unique needs and experiences of older persons globally in the enjoyment of their rights and in addressing violations. It will also emphasize how fostering equitable reciprocity and solidarity between generations can provide sustainable solutions to fulfill the aspirations of the Sustainable Development Goals.

The outcomes of the 4th review and appraisal of the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing underscore that age-based discrimination in institutions, attitudes and practices remain rampant. In the absence of human rights norms and standards, particularly to the situation of older persons at the international level, the ability to unpack the complexities and changing nature of discrimination and intersecting forms of inequality across the life course is limited. The work of the International Community around intergenerational solidarity has demonstrated, time and again, through various fora that intergenerational solutions, which are guided by the human rights principles of participation, accountability, non-discrimination and equality, empowerment and legality, can contribute to rekindling the legacy, relevance and activism of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights by empowering both youth and older persons to shift the needle of political will towards fulfilling the promises of the Declaration for all people across generations.

#UNIDOP2023 #OlderPersonsDay

Objectives:

The United Nations International Day of Older Persons 2023 is a call to action and opportunity, with globally representative experts offering a multi-stakeholder dialogue on a range of human rights of older persons and as well as on examples of policies that facilitate intergenerational solutions, taking into account a life course approach to equality, freedom and justice for all. Panelists will highlight the importance of intergenerational solidarity guided by the human rights principles in various contexts towards fulfilling the promises of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights for people across generations.

Objectives of UNIDOP 2023 New York Commemoration:

- To increase global knowledge and awareness of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and generate commitments among all stakeholders to strengthen the protection of the human rights of current and future generations of older persons around the world;
- To share and learn from intergenerational models for the protection of human rights around the world; and
- To call on Governments and UN entities to review their current practices with a view to better integrate a life course approach to human rights in their work, and to ensure the active and meaningful participation of all stakeholders, including civil society, national human rights institutions and older persons themselves, in the work on strengthening solidarity among generations and intergenerational partnerships.
