Persons with disabilities continue to have limited access to the labour market. The employment-to-population ratio of persons with disabilities aged 15 and older is almost half that of persons without disabilities (Figure 1) and employed persons with disabilities tend to earn lower wages than their counterparts without disabilities. Lack of accessible workplaces and reasonable accommodation pose further obstacles in the employment of persons with disabilities. In eight developing countries, 32 per cent of persons with disabilities consider their workplace hindering or not accessible.

To improve the employment situation of persons with disabilities, quota systems, which oblige employers to hire a certain number or percentage of persons with disabilities, have been adopted by at least 99 countries. Quotas typically range from 1 per cent to 15 per cent (Figure 2).
The most effective quota systems include the payment of a levy by the non-complying company for every position not held by a person with disabilities. These levies typically contribute to a special fund used to finance measures promoting the employment of persons with disabilities. Countries have also adopted employment laws and policies that ensure the right of persons with disabilities to equal employment opportunities and prohibit discrimination on the grounds of disability. In 22 countries, national constitutions explicitly guarantee the right to work for persons with disabilities. More than 60 per cent of countries include provisions in their labour laws prohibiting discrimination in employment and guaranteeing equal pay for persons with disabilities. Moreover, some national programmes provide financial support for persons with disabilities in accessing mainstream technical and vocational education and training.

To address the current employment gaps and realize Goal 8 for persons with disabilities, States should ensure that:

- National legislation protects persons with disabilities from discrimination in all matters of employment.
- The public sector hires persons with disabilities.
- Public procurement policies and systems encourage the employment of persons with disabilities.
- Public employment services are inclusive of persons with disabilities.
- Mainstream vocational education has provisions to include persons with disabilities.
- Mainstream entrepreneurship development training and microfinance systems include persons with disabilities.
- Policies are in place that facilitate job retention and return-to-work options for persons who acquire a disability, including for persons with mental health conditions.
- Support is provided for persons with disabilities in sheltered employment to enter the mainstream labour market.
- Social protection systems are designed to provide income security and support for disability-related needs.
- Evaluation plans are built to implement programmes to improve the employment of persons with disabilities.
- A database of available information and disaggregated data on disability and employment is developed.
